Players are asked to re-invent the goalkeeper role. The new Pro Action Zone is at the heart of the goalkeeper's repertoire, and offers players, fans and coaches a completely new way to interact with players. The Pro Action Zone is a true attempt to re-invent the goalkeeper by allowing the goalkeeper the ability to go on the offensive and help build attacks from any position in the pitch. Here are all the details related to FIFA 22 gameplay.

Gameplay From Play Styles to Player Traits

There are four new play styles in FIFA 22. These can be acquired and unlocked either through individual XP progression in all modes of the game, or in the Over The Top mode. All play styles can be customised through points earned by using players acquired through gameplay. The FIFA online gameplay modes will also feature a new type of online Season Mode which will be available to play in UEFA Champions League, UEFA Europa League, FIFA World Cup, FIFA Confederations Cup, and FIFA Club World Cup. The new mode will be available for all user-generated content (UGC) created in FIFA 22.

Offside Decision-Making

Making offside decisions in the game will now be based on player vision. For example, if a midfielder/attacking player has no line of sight to goal, then the offside decision will be made based on the closest defender who has a clear view of the play. This means that all players are now responsible for the decisions made around offside rules. This makes offside a more tactical decision, as everyone has a part to play in order to ensure the offside rule is applied correctly.

Zonal Ball Control

The new Ball Control system will now account for every player on the pitch and will make decisions regarding when to change the ball based on the speed of each player, the number of players behind the ball, the current defensive shape, and much more. The Ball Control system has been improved to include the likes of an Optimum Ployout, which will be based on the player's current positioning and the speed of the ball. It can also be modified based on the offside rule, by designating the best option for every situation. The Ball Control system will allow the player to receive the ball and make decisions based on the conditions, by adapting the speed of the player to the speed of the ball. When the ball is passed, the player will be able to make offside
