2017 ArtworkAs he has done in recent seasons, right-hander Shonn Miller is expected to return to the Royals rotation in 2017. The Royals had initially declined to set an innings limit for Miller, who was set free to work at his own pace with the hope of returning to the mound. But he was unable to shake the injury bug and ended the season on the injured list. Miller, 25, had been recovering from Tommy John surgery that cost him most of the 2015 season. He underwent arthroscopic surgery in October to repair a torn labrum in his right shoulder. "It was tough to watch it," Royals General Manager Dayton Moore said. "To me, he was one of the big storylines of the 2015 season. He showed himself to be a big-time pitcher and then it all went to waste. It was tough to watch." Moore added, "The one thing I will say, he's a really good person. He was ready to come back when he had an opportunity. This time, he said, 'If you need me to pitch in spring training, I'll be ready to do that.' We said OK, we'll try it." The Royals signed Miller to a minor-league contract after the 2015 season. He was 4-6 with a 3.78 ERA in 58 appearances, 32 of them starts. "The goal is to get back healthy and do what I know I can do," Miller said. "No matter what happens, this is my season, and I'm going to go out and have fun with it." Miller threw 25 pitches during his latest workout in Surprise, Ariz., earlier this month. It was his second major-league simulated game. "I'm excited about it," Miller said. "I'm looking forward to the second half of the season and then going into spring training. This is where I want to be, and I think it's in the best interests of my career to go out and prove I can do this. "I'm feeling a lot better," Miller added. "I've done a lot of work. I'm stronger and feel better than I've felt in a while. That's a good thing. I'm a little disappointed it took me this long, but it's over now. I'm
